Character of Stonewall Jackson.

[From the "Lost Cause," a new Southern History of the War. By E. A. Pollard. In the Press of E. B. Treat & Co., Publishers, 130 Grand Street, New York.]

* * * * *

There was, probably, no more ambitious man in the Southern Confederacy than "Stonewall" Jackson. The vulgar mind thinks that it easily discovers those who are ambitious in a community. It readily designates as such those who aspire to offices and public positions, who seek sensations, court notoriety in newspapers, and hold up their hands for the applause of the multitude. But ambition, in its true and noble sense, is very different from these coarse bids for popular favor. There is a class of apparently quiet minds which, choosing seclusion and mystery, and wearing an air of absence, and even misanthropy, moving in their daily walks with an appearance of profound unconcern, are yet living for history, and are daily and nightly consumed with the fires of ambition. It is this sort of ambition which cherishes and attempts ideals; which is founded on a deep and unconquerable self esteem; and which is often haughtily, and even grimly, silent, from a consciousness of its own powers, or an ever-present belief in its destiny.

Of such an order of ambition, those who knew General Jackson best, declare that he was singularly possessed. He believed in his destiny, whatever religious name he chose to attach to that transcendental and ravishing sentiment; he was fond of repeating to his intimate friends that "mystery was the secret of success;" and because he went about his work with a silent and stern manner, that was no proof of the opinion of the populace that he was simply a machine of conscientious motives, with no sentiment in his composition but that of duty.

It is not unfrequently the experience of truly great men, that they have to live through a period of utter misapprehension of their worth, and often of intense ridicule. Such was the painful experience of General Jackson. At the Virginia military school, at Lexington, where he was a professor before the war, he was thought to be stupid and harmless, and he was often the butt of the academic wit of that institution. Colonel Gillem, who taught tactics there, was taken to be the military genius of the place, and afterwards gave evidence of the correctness of this appreciation by actually losing, during the war, in the mountains of northwestern Virginia, the only regiment that he was ever trusted to command. At the battle of Manassas, despite the critical and splendid service which Jackson did there, for he stayed the retreat in the rear of the Robinson House, and in the subsequent charge pierced the enemy's centre, his stiff and odd figure drew upon him the squibs of all the newspaper correspondents on the field. His habit of twisting his head and interpolating "sir," in all his remarks, was humorously described in the Charleston Mercury. At a later period of his military career, when he made his terrible wintry march in 1861-'2, from Winchester to Bath and Romney, and became involved in differences with General Loring, it was actually reported that he was insane. A colonel came to Richmond with the report that Jackson had gone 'mad; that his mania was, that a familiar spirit had taken possession of a portion of his body; and that he was in the habit of walking by himself, and holding audible conversations with a mysterious being.

It was about this time that General Jackson came under the fitful cloud of President Davis' displeasure; and he was so much affected by the course of the Richmond authorities towards him, in his affair with Loring, that at one time he determined to resign. The extreme sensibility of his nature, and his evident ambition were unmasked in the letters he wrote his wife, alluding to the then probable close of his military career, and submitting to what he supposed "the will of God" in the abrupt termination of his hopes. But it was not decreed by Providence that the Confederate cause should then lose the services of Jackson, and its chief ornament be plucked from it, and its great pillar of strength cast down, through a paltry official embroilment in Richmond. By the earnest persuasions of Governor Letcher and others, General Jackson was induced to withdraw his letter of resignation; and that sword, which might have been dropped in an obscure quarrel, was yet to carve out the most brilliant name in the war.

The fame of Jackson was first secured and permanently erected in the popular heart by his splendid and ever-memorable campaign in the Valley of Virginia in the spring of 1862. In that campaign, as we have seen, in the period of three weeks he fought four battles; recovered Winchester; captured four thousand prisoners; secured several million dollars' worth of stores; chased Banks' army out of Virginia and across the Potomac; and accomplished a list of deeds that threw the splendour of sunlight over the fortunes of the Confederacy, and broke, at the critical moment, the heaviest shadows of defeat and misfortune that had so far befallen them. In the Seven Days' Battles the name of Jackson again rose like a star. And yet it was to gather new effulgence when the names of Second Manasses and the Wilderness were to be inscribed alike on the banners of the Confederacy and the escutcheon of his own fame.

Jackson's intense religious character has naturally come in for a large share of public admiration and curiosity. To his merits as a commander he added the virtues of an active, humble, consistent Christian, restraining profanity in his camp, welcoming army colporteurs, distributing tracts, and anxious to have every regiment in his army supplied with a chaplain. Prayer meetings and "revivals" were common occurrences in his camp, and in these he was quite as active and conspicuous as in the storm and action of battle. It was said that he treated the itinerant preachers and "circuit riders" who flocked to his camp with much more distinction than any other visitors: and the story is told how, on one occasion, when the horse driven by one of these itinerants balked at a hill, Jackson himself insisted upon leading and assisting the animal up the acclivity, in the astonished sight of his whole army.

His nature was epicene. We but seldom see a combination of feminine tenderness with a really strong will; but when we do, we see masked iron in the man, and discover the rarest and loftiest type of greatness. Such a combination was most sincere and striking in Jackson. An authentich anecdote is told of him illustrating his extreme tenderness to whatever was weak or helpless. Stopping at the house of a friend one wintry night, he showed much concern for a little delicate girl of the family, and counselled them to see that her bed was comfortable. After the family had retired, Jackson was seen to leave his chamber and approach the bedside of the little girl, where for some moments he busied himself tucking the bedclothes around her, and making the little girl as snug as possible. The large, rough hand that did this gentle task was the same tha wielded the thunderbolt of battle, and that cleft like flaming lighting the hosts of the Wilderness.

Jackson's habits in the field were those of almost superhuman endurance. Neither heat nor cold appeared to make the slightest impression upon him. He cared nothing for good quarters and dainty fare. He often slept on the ground wrapped in his blanket. His vigilance was marvellous; he never seemed to sleep; he let nothing pass without his personal scrutiny. His active determination and grim energy in the field were scarcely to be expected from one who in preceding years had been a quiet professor in a college of youths. As for the rapidity of his marches, there was something portentous.

The London Times, a journal whose judgments of men were taken in the cotemporary world almost as the sentences of history, frequently compared Jackson to Napoleon. "He was," said this great organ of European opinion, "one of the most consummate Generals that this century has produced. * * That mixture of daring and judgment which is the mark of 'Heaven-born' Generals distinguished him beyond any man of his time.—Although the young Confederacy has been illustrated by a number of eminent soldiers, yet the applause and devotion of his countrymen, confirmed by the judgment of European nations, have given the first place to General Jackson. The military feats he accomplished moved the minds of the people with astonishment, which it is only given to the highest genius to produce. The blows he struck at the enemy were as terrible and decisive as those of Bonaparte himself."

There can be no doubt in history of the military genius of Jackson. There is a certain ignorant idea of genius as a thoughtless and careless disposition of mind, which gets its inspirations without trouble, and never descends to actual labour. Such was not the genius of Jackson; and such is not true genius. He was an intense, laborious thinker; he wrestled with great thoughts; he had his silent calculations; but having once apprehended the true thought and got to a point in his meditations, he acted with a rapidity, a decision, and a confidence that scorned hesitation, refused longer to think, and took the appearance of impetuous inspiration.

Danger, in a certain sense, intoxicated him. But it did not produce that intoxication which confuses the mind, or makes it giddy with a crowd of images. It was that sort of intoxication which strings the nerve, stimulates the brain, concentrates the faculties and gives a consciousness of power that is for the moment irresistible. In battle he was not much in motion; but his eyes glowed; his face was blazened with the fire of conflict; his massive jaw stiffened; his voice rang out sharp and clear; every order and remark was quick and pertinent as if it had been studied for hours. One could scarcely recognize in this figure of intense activity, all alive, with every faculty at play, the man who used to occupy himself with rambling soliloquies in the rear of his tent; who presented the appearance of an inanimate figure-head in his pew at the Presbyterian church in Lexington; and who often got up out of his camp-bed at night to spend hours in silent prayer and meditation.

It may be readily imagined that the wonderful career of Jackson and his personal eccentricities drew upon him a crowd of apocryphal anecdotes in the newspapers. Some of them were very absurd. His person was as variously represented in newspaper paragraphs as if, instead of being familiar to thousands, he inhabited the dim outlines of another century. One journal described him as an absurdly ugly man, with red hair; another gave his portrait as that of an immense brain, and features on which nature had stamped its patent of nobility. One newspaper correspondent declared that he always wore the brim of his cap on the middle of his nose. Another declared that he was an execrable rider, and looked like a loose jumping-jack on horseback.

There is a popular disposition to discover something curious or grotesque in great men.—But there was really but little of this sort to be discovered in Jackson, and scarcely anything that could be pointed out as objects of vulgar curiosity. It is true, his figure was queer and clumsy, but the features of his face were moulded in forms of simple grandeur, and its expression was as unaffected as that of Lee himself. The vulgar might call him such; and the newspaper passion for caricature did so represent him. Nor did he have in face or figure those marks which the silly admiration of women expects to find in military heroes. He did not wear long greasy hair falling over his shoulders; he did not stand in dramatic attitudes; he did not keep his eyes unnaturally stretched; he did not thrust out his chest as if determined to impose upon himself upon public attention. His features were singularly simple and noble. A broad forehead, rising prominently over his eyes, and retreating at that easy angle which gives a certain majesty to the face, covered a massive brain; his nostrils were unusually large; his jaw heavy and well set, and although his features were coarse, they were combined in that expression of dignity and power, which to the intelligent and appreciative, even among women, is the greatest charm of the masculine face.

The death of Jackson cast a shadow on the fortunes of the Confederacy that reached the catastrophe of the war. It was not only a loss to his country; it was a calamity to the world; a subtraction from the living generation of genius; the extinction of a great light in the temples of Christianity. The proposition was cagerly made in the South to erect to his memory a stately monument. The State of Virginia sent an artist to Europe to execute his statue. Thousands followed him to the grave and consecrated it with the tributes of affection and the testimonies of devotion. Who, then, regarding this fervour of admiration and gratitude, could have supposed that the Southern mind could ever become so chilled in any change of events, or in any mutation of fortune, as to forget, alike, its debt of gratitude and its objects of pride in the glorious past; and that the time could ever come when the household effects of Stonewall Jackson would be sold under the hammer of an auctioneer, and the family of this man committed to the trials and chances of poverty?

IMPORTANT SALE.

ON WEDNESDAY, THE 24TH OF JANUARY, 1866, I shall offer for sale, my plantation in Bertie County, lying on the Roanoke River, three miles from Hill's Ferry on said river, and six from the village of Woodville in Bertie County containing 1000 acres, more or less; 500 acres cleared and well adapted to the growth of cotton, corn, wheat, &c.
There is a very fine opportunity to make a large cotton crop on the plantation the next year, as there is compost enough ready made to manure nearly 100 acres. The plantation made in 1864, 43,000 pounds of lint cotton, and 4,000 bushels of corn; and, with proper management, will do a great deal better for the next year, as the most of the cotton land has had rest for the past two years A very great advantage which this farm has, is its convenience to transportation, being only one mile to a good landing on the river, where there is a regular line of steamers to Norfolk weekly. In addition to the above, this is the only river farm in this portion of the county that has fire wood enough, conveniently for use; there is an abundance here, and timber of almost every kind, cypress, oak, hickory, ash gum, &c. Lumber dealers would do well to examine the land before the day of sale.
There are about 400 or 500 acres on this tract uncleared, which affords a fine range for hogs, and a free access to numberless acres of uncultivated lands renders it very profitable for the raising of cattle, colts &c.
The improvements consist of a gin house and cotton screw, overseer's house, cabins enough for 25 or 30 laborers, corn barns &c. At the same time and place, I shall sell 200 or 300 barrels of corn, fodder, mules, horses, hogs, farming utensils &c
Terms for the land: one third cash, the balance in two equal instalments, payable respectively in 12 and 18 months, and title withheld until payments made. For the perishable property, cash.

THE PEOPLE must be trusted with their Government, and if trusted, my opinion is that they will act in good faith, and restore their former constitutional relations with all the States composing the Union.—Andrew Johnson's Letter to Gov. Sharkey, of Mississippi.

The Wilmington Herald.

This journal is edited by a Northern man, an adventurer, who came out with the Federal troops that captured Wilmington. He is, moreover, a protege, we learn, of Bennett, of the New York Herald. The fact that he is of Northern birth is not objectionable to us, nor should it be to any reasonable man. We judge men by their merits, their deportment; hence we esteem a man, who is a gentleman, because he is one, wherever he may have been born.

In this much, we intend no reflection upon Mr. Cook personally, the editor of the Herald in Wilmington, whose appearance and manners seemed to be those of a gentleman, when he called on us some months ago. Nor are they intended to pay him off for his frequent unjust allusions to the Sentinel, of which we made no note; but to enable the reader to understand and appreciate the force of any attack which the Herald may make upon the "loyal" editors of North Carolina and upon Gov. Worth.

The Herald's issue, of Thursday last, contains a characteristic attack upon three of the editorial fraternity of the State, marked by its usual unfairness, and lacking in professional courtesy. Besides, it has a shameless misrepresentation of Gov. Worth. Upon these two points we propose, briefly, to animadvert.

The Herald alludes, with semi-pleasure and semi-regret, to the arrest of the editors of the Fayetteville News, Charlotte Times and Goldsboro' News. Our own regrets for our cotemporaries have led us to avoid almost any allusion to it. But the Herald strives to impress its readers with the idea that these "loyal" editors were arrested for disloyalty. It says:

"Let us see: A certain class of journals, always making great pretensions to loyalty, will persist in opposing the loyal purposes of the government. We say the "loyal" purposes of the government, because, by a well established principle of law, a government cannot be disloyal. And if a government is always loyal, those who oppose that government, or its policy or purposes, must be disloyal. Therefore, those newspaper editors who persist in opposing the policy of the government of the United States—which is now the supreme power in the land—must be disloyal, their pretensions to the contrary notwithstanding."

Our understanding is, that they were arrested not upon the charge of disloyalty, but for using seditious language. A very loyal man may use seditious language, i. e. factious, turbulent language—language calculated to stir up strife and tumult against the authorities or the government. Such language generally originates in passion and excited temper, and is often used indiscreetly, under wrong impressions, and with no intent to raise hostility or tumult against the government. We learn that all these editors protest, that they had no such intention, and their loyalty, we believe, no one questions, who knows them. But have they opposed the government, or its policy or its purposes? Wherein? When? They are all warm advocates of the policy and purposes of President Johnson and his administration. They are hostile to radicalism, and so does the Herald profess to be. It was this opposition to radicalism, we presume, which led to the remarks deemed by the authorities seditious. We are quite sure that neither of the editors named oppose the policy or purposes of the government; so far from it, they heartily endorse and support them.

The policy and purpose of the government evidently is, to restore the Southern States, as soon as they are ready. Until this is done, the continuance of the military and the Freedmen's Bureau will be kept up. Have these editors opposed this? They may be anxious for the period to arrive for their termination, but they must see the necessity for their continuance until civil rule has been fully established. Have they opposed the manner in which these departments have been executed in North Carolina? Have they criticised the administration of Gen. Ruger or of Col. Whittlesey? If they have, it has escaped our notice.

We have had occasion several times to express our satisfaction at the manner in which Gen. Ruger and Col. Whittlesey have administered their affairs. Our approval has been sincere, because we have seen nothing which led us to believe that they acted from any other motives than to follow instructions and discharge their obligations to the government. Yet we are equally well satisfied that the editors, who have fallen under the displeasure of the authorities, have had no intention to provoke that displeasure. Whether it is best, under all the circumstances, or the wisest course, to arrest persons who are immoderate and injudicious in the use of language, we leave to the government to determine.

But the attack of the Herald upon Governor Worth is still more unjustifiable. It says:

"When Gov. Worth said, a few days ago, that he did not believe there was a disloyal man in the State, he evidently looked upon the state government of which he was the representative as the supreme power in the land. He discovered no symptoms of opposition to that government; therefore he concluded, that the whole people were loyal. But he forgot that at the very moment at which he wrote, one of the editors referred to above was in custody at his capitol on a charge of disloyalty to the superior power, the government of the United States. He forgot that several gentlemen of the State—widely known in political circles—had not yet been purged of what the superior power denominates treason."

Then the Herald will write down Gov. Worth either a fool or a disloyal man. A Governor, who seriously maintains that "he is the representative of the supreme power in the land," is a simpleton, is he not, Mr. Herald? If he wickedly maintains that doctrine, is he not disloyal, Mr. Herald? Which horn will you take? If you charge Gov. Worth with being a simpleton, your own columns condemn you. If you charge him with disloyalty, you are convicted of falsehood by your repeated declarations. The columns of the Herald have endorsed Gov. Worth's loyalty and ability, but now it attacks both.

Gov. Worth expressed his confidence in the loyalty of all his people. Can the Herald prove the contrary? He does this when he knows that an editor was in this city under arrest, and that there were several gentlemen in the State, who had not been pardoned! Gov. Worth spoke of the intentions and purposes of his people. The Herald thinks that men not pardoned are disloyal—that an editor must be disloyal if he is charged with sedition. Gov. Vance and Mr. Geo. Davis are not pardoned, and yet, the other day, when Gov. Vance visited Wilmington, and Mr. Davis returned home, the Herald beat both the Dispatch and Journal in flinging up its hat and making a great ado over these gentlemen. They were worthy of all the Herald said about them. But if they were disloyal, ought the Herald to have made such an ado over them? Will the Herald thus countenance and patronize disloyalty? O, for shame!

But the Herald says, only the editors of journals who opposed Gov. Holden have been arrested for their language. This is not true. The editor of one of the most influential journals that supported Gov. Holden has been arrested for his language. But we do not tell tales out of school. Let the Herald find out.

Gov. Andrew has been elected President of the New England Historic-Genealogical Society for the ensuing year.

We find the foregoing announcement in our Northern exchanges. We would suggest, as a fit subject for the inaugural essay of this great negrophilist, "The history and genealogy of the Puritans." He might tell, for example, how they left England, professing to flee from persecution and to seek a place in which to worship God according to the dictates of conscience, and how, as soon as they were settled, they enslaved the Indians, roasted men at the stake, burnt innocent women as witches, passed the most infamous and cruel penal laws against the Quakers, and exiled Baptists and Catholics. Nor would it do to omit to mention how they imported blacks from Africa and sold them into slavery, long before the institution was known at the South. All this, delivered with that could not fail of being highly entertaining to the denizens of the "hub of the Universe."

It is to be hoped that Gov. Andrew's duties, as President of the Society in question, will not interfere with his further duties as President, also, of the Southern Emigration Society, by means of whose operations it is proposed to evangelize the Southern heathen and—fill his own pockets.

"Peace and its victories: Reunited brethren, a restored Union, prosperity that has had no parallel, and a Republic without a rival."

The above sentiment, which constituted one of the regular toasts offered at the Tammany celebration, in New York, on the 8th inst., will find a hearty responsive echo throughout the South, when practically illustrated. So long, however, as the national councils are infested with political visionaries and malignants, who seek to subvert the Constitution and revolutionize the framework of the government, under the plea of punishing a rebellion which they labored for many years to incite, and which has been fully suppressed, it cannot naturally be expected that we can fully enter into the spirit of the sentiment. When their hostility ceases to vent itself in passionate reflections and the most destructive machinations against our interests and peace, the people of the South will be ready to meet them more than half way. The brave are ever generous and forgiving.

In peace or in war, the North is powerless without a cordial re-union of the South. It will require this to develope the vast resources of the Southern States, and pour into the national treasury the golden stream of commerce. This is indispensable to a successful management of the currency difficulties and the discharge of the debt which hangs as an incubus upon the energies of the whole people.

Writs of Election.

The Governor issued writs on Saturday to the Sheriff of Sampson county, directing an election to be held in that county, on the 27th January, for a member to the State Convention, and one to the State Senate, to fill the vacancies caused by the death of Thomas I. Faison, Esq.

A writ was also issued to the Sheriff of Beaufort county, directing an election to be held in that county, on the 30th January, to fill the vacancy in the State Senate, caused by the resignation of Hon. E. J. Warren, elected Judge.

OUTRAGEOUS MURDER.—On Wednesday night last, the house of Samuel N. Cannon, Esq., about five miles from Wilmington, was attacked by robbers, and Mr. Thos. Pickett, a relative, was shot in the breast and instantly killed; his daughter, Caroline, also received a severe wound in the head. His step-daughter, Sarah Jane Carter, also received a wound in the forehead. Mr. Cannon made his escape to a neighbor's house and procured assistance, but, on his return with his posse, the robbers had left.

The Journal says that the robbers were negroes, and wore the federal uniform. They are believed to be of the 37th regiment, U. S. C. T., stationed at Fort Fisher.

De QUINCEY, in his "Confessions," tells us that, in one of the lucid intervals between his periodical and excessive indulgences in opium, he accidentally encountered a roving Malay, of strange appearance, who had, by some chance, found his way into the rural districts of England. Forever, thereafter, up to the period of his reformation, that Malay was present to his vision, when under the influence of the poisonous draught. Whether he lay on his bed or strolled in the fields, in the broad glare of sun-shine or in the quiet watches of the night, sleeping or waking, the grotesque image was his familiar spirit.

A similar demon, in the shape of the negro, seems to have taken possession of the Congress of the United States, which nothing can exorcise. Their ravings upon the subject are even more delirious and unreasoning than those produced by the Eastern drug. They see visions of the negro—the everlasting negro,—in every event of the times and every issue of the day. In Church, in State, in the social circle, at their meals, in their meditations, (if they ever reflect,) and in their worship, (if they ever pray,) the dusky hue of the African is omnipresent, to cloud their perceptions and tinge their fancies. It interposes as an apparition between them and every conviction of duty, every impulse of patriotism and every prompting of justice. Not until the deluded victims die the political death, which there is some reason to hope is no remote probability, as the result of their crazy orgies, can we expect any tranquilized condition of public feeling, or any return to sober reason.

We copy, from the "Courier des Etats Unis," the following ironical article in reference to the case of young Ketchum, the New York forger:

"There are certain disinherited nations who know only by hear-say republican and democratic virtues, and who have the weakness to believe that the higher the position the culpable hold in society, the more worthy they are of punishment. Those old fogy nations think, for example, that if a forgery may be pardoned in the case of an unfortunate being led to it by want, there is no excuse for one in the enjoyment of all the blessings of this world. Such ideas are an unequivocal proof of the moral degradation of people who have groaned for a long time under the yoke of tyranny. Where liberty reigns without restraint, more liberal opinions are professed.

Thus, young Ketchum, having upon his conscience forgeries only to the amount of five or six millions, has been treated in his prison, and by the Judge, with all the consideration due to his crime, and has been condemned only to four and a half years of imprisonment. But even that punishment is considered too great for a rich man, holding a high rank in society, and who has influential friends; for, we know that, under a democratic government, protection and favor are never permitted to shield the guilty. Consequently, a number of distinguished gentlemen, and among them Mr. Horace Greely, have signed a petition for the pardon of Ketchum.—Mr. Chase, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, whose business it is to see that law, morals and justice are respected every where, does not disdain to associate himself in that honorable demonstration, and to put his name to the petition. No one is freer than he from low prejudices, or respects more the high charge with which he is invested. We truly hope that when that illustrious example shall be known in Europe, the Lord Keeper of the seals of England, or the President of the Court of Cassation in France, will hasten to demand the pardon of the first great forger that a jury shall have unduly convicted. Is it not from the West that go forth the progress and light of the age?"

For the Sentinel.

LOUISBURG, N. C., Jan. 10th, 1866.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—The accomplished scholar and divine, Rev. T. M. Jones, who presided for many years over the Greensboro Female College with such distinguished ability, now has charge of the Louisburg Female College. The first session under his auspices opened to-day, and Louisburg can now boast a school not surpassed by any in North Carolina. In days gone by, when John B. Bobbitt and A. H. Ray were with us, her schools were her pride, and we doubt not that it will be gratifying to hundreds of ladies and gentlemen in the eastern part of the State, who were educated here, to be informed that there is, in the "beautiful old grove," a magnificent edifice dedicated to Female Education, and presided over by the genius of Turner M. Jones. No school in the State can present superior advantages. The location is healthy, the community moral and intelligent, the College building is large and pleasantly situated, the rooms are commodious and comfortably warmed with open fire places, (chimmeys having been built,) instead of hot air furnaces, as in times past—a good library and all necessary apparatus—skilful teachers—a well conducted boarding department—every thing necessary to promote the moral and intellectual training of girls, and prepare them for the noble and responsible duties of educated women.

To the parent who wishes to secure for his daughter the great blessing of a cultivated head and heart, we commend the Louisburg Female College.

HON. A. H. STEPHENS—HIS VIEWS.—A letter from Hon. A. H. Stevens, dated at Crawfordsville, Georgia, 25th ultimo, contains the following paragraph:

As to how I am doing, I can only say that, in the matter of health, I have improved greatly since my return home; but the country I find in a worse condition, physically, morally and politically than I expected. The general desire of the people is for a speedy restoration of civil law and harmony, and I am engaged in doing all I can to effect that result. I do trust that wisdom, moderation and true patriotism will rule the councils at Washington. * * * * * Meanwhile, it is the duty of every one to do the best he can; the wise and the good will always take things as they find them, and do the best they can with them as they present themselves.

"AN ATROCIOUS SENTIMENT.—The new Governor of Wisconsin, Fairchild, in his Inaugural Address, speaking of Jefferson Davis, makes use of the following langauge:

"Not until Jefferson Davis shall have been tried, convicted and hung for treason, and the fact that treason is a crime, which cannot be committed with impunity, shall have thus been demonstrated, will the people be content."

We believe it to be a vile slander upon the American people to say that they are thirsting for the blood of this brave but now fallen and helpless man. Whatever may have been his faults, his misfortunes entitle him to the sympathy of all generous hearted men, while the manly spirit with which he bears them commands respect. The man who would now demand his life, or taunt him in his claims, is recreant to every impulse of decency and magnanimity.—Louisville (Ky) Courier.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10, 1866.

DEAR SENTINEL:—Our metropolis has experienced, to-day, weather of such severity as has not been known here for sixty years. Broadway was never more scarce of pedestrians, and vehicles of all kinds were sadly lessened in number. The sun shines cold and blue, and those who are compelled to be out do no slow walking, I assure you. "Hot Punches" are at a premium, and the car and stage drivers, who necessarily bear the worst of it, attract universal sympathy. The mercury has remained ten degrees below zero all day, and the rivers are filled with ice. God help the poor thousands, who inhabit dark, damp cellars this weather!

The recent reports of the board of Surgeons to the police commissioners have pained, as well as astonished, the denizens of this great city no little, and aroused most to the belief that, unless steps are immediately taken for reform in certain tenement houses, &c., Cholera will reap a fearful harvest the coming spring.

The decline in Gold to-day is 3 cents. $190,000 in bonds sold at 139, at 30 days credit. The fall is attributable to numerous causes.

Rev. Dr. Cummins, of the St. Stephens church, was interred to-day. The funeral services were of an unusually interesting nature, and the church was elaborately draped in mourning. One thousand dollars worth of flowers were used in decorating the coffin, &c. The Dr. was very popular in the city. Endowed with a kind, generous nature, and a mind of rare intellectual culture, he had drawn around him hosts of the warmest friends, who vied with each other to-day in paying the last tribute of respect to his memory. No funeral obsequies, since those of Archbishop Hughes, have created so great a sensation in the Catholic world.

Sunday was the 100th. anniversary of Methodism in this country and was properly regarded in all the churches of that denomination.

Madlle Parepa, the great prima donna, gives her farewell concert at the Academy of Music to-morrow night. Bennett, of the Herald, still continues his malicious attacks on the dramatic and musical artistes, not sparing either sex. Edwin Booth, the eminent though unfortunate tragedian, was warmly welcomed on his re-appearance a few evenings since.

The intelligent people here, generally, look favorably on the President's efforts to restore the South to civil government, and his policy is sustained by the masses.

When a thaw comes, I will write you again from Gotham.

Yours, &c.

CAROLINA.

A Letter From Mrs. Jefferson Davis.

A number of ladies in Mississippi have formed themselves into an association, a branch of which is to be established in each of the Southern States, the principal object of which is to raise a fund that will place the wife and children of Jefferson Davis above the possibility of want or dependence upon the charity of friends. The method adopted to raise money is by voluntary subscription and by the sale of card photographs of Mr. Davis. The latter have the stamp of the society upon the back, and are disposed of at the rate of one dollar each as the minimum price. Mrs. Davis has written the following touching letter to the Secretary of the Association:

MILL VIEW, GEORGIA,
December 4, 1865.

To B. Clarke, Esq., Secretary and Agent L. S. A. Association:

MY DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your very kind letter in the name "of the Ladies' Southern Aid Association," having "for its object the purpose of placing" me "and family in circumstances somewhat commensurate with their estimate of" me and mine, and begging that I will, at my earliest convenience, designate a place to which the means so collected may be conveyed, so that they may "safely and satisfactorily" reach me.

From our desolate and impoverished friends I scarcely expected such an expression of material sympathy, though my powers of gratitude have been almost daily taxed to thank those who have, with so much heart-eloquence, plead with the President for him who, though unsuccessful, has given you all he could—his best energies—and whose only hope of future happiness lies in the sweet trust, often expressed, that he has not lost your confidence and love. Ignorant of all which his own people have done for him in his painful captivity, his devotion is unabated. "The unfortunate have always been deserted and betrayed, but did ever man have less to complain of when he had lost the power to serve? The multitudes are silent; why should they speak save to Him who hears best the words most secretly uttered? My own heart tells me the sympathy exists—that the prayers from the family hearth are not hushed. Be loving and confiding still to those from whom I have received much more than I deserved, far more official honours than I ever desired. Those for whose cause I suffer are not unworthy of the devotion of all which I had to give."—This is the message of love which is sent through prison gates to our own people. I say our people, because both of us have been brought up with you; one of us was born in Mississippi, the other came to her in infancy. These are my own people, and it is a privilege of which no change of circumstances can deprive me. To the accepted prayers of our widows and orphans, our suffering but heroic women, our brave and true men, our innocent little children, I look for the restoration to my little children of their agonized but Christian father. If a merciful Providence so ordain it, we hope to live and die among you, mutually consoling and bearing each others' burthens. I pray God we may not be driven forth from the home of our childhood, "for how can we sing our own song in a strange land?" We would not have our dear friends betrayed by their sympathy into offering, for our use, too much from their own "basket and store." I and mine have, so far, been miraculously cared for and shielded from want. We seem ever environed by the love which is reflected upon us from that which lighted my husband in his dungeon, softened his prison walls with sunny pictures of loving eyes and outstretched arms.

Grief and gratitude seemed to impose upon me silence. I would, but cannot, say more. I will enclose within this note the names and directions of gentlemen to whom the contributions of which you speak may be enclosed. And instead of the eloquent voice which so often has poured forth his love to his dear people, now mute, I offer a wife's, and mother's, and a country woman's gratitude to you and those you represent.

I have the honor to be, very gratefully and sincerely yours,

VARINA DAVIS.

HIGH SHOAL IRON AND GOLD PROPERTY.—This magnificent property of gold and iron mines, and water-power, has been sold by the owners, the Messrs. Bridgers, of Edgecombe, to a company of Washington and Baltimore capitalists. The new owners design to use the property for general mining and manufacturing purposes, and, if sufficient encouragement be extended by the railroads of the State, will establish a rolling mill for the manufacture of iron.—*N. DAILY SENTINEL.

Monday, January 15, 1866.

CITY AND STATE ITEMS.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS—The Edgeworth Seminary, in Greensboro, is offered for lease or sale.

A young gentleman of Warrenton, with several years experience, desires a situation as Teacher.

The Greensboro' Mutual Life Insurance and Trust Co. issues a notice to its patrons and to those indebted.

Mrs. Ed. Graham Haywood offers board for six or eight gentlemen, permanently or during the ensuing session of the Legislature.

TURNER'S ALMANAC.—We are pleased to chronicle the re-appearance of this old "institution." The one for 1866 has been laid upon our table, and contains the usual amount of interesting information. Orders should be addressed to Henry D. Turner, Raleigh, N. C.

JUDGE QUALIFIED.—Hon. E. J. Warren, one of the Judges of the Superior Courts of Law and Equity, was duly qualified, by taking the oaths of office, on Saturday last. About half the Judges have thus far been qualified.

WAYNE FEMALE COLLEGE.—This institution will be re-opened the latter part of March or first of April. The buildings and grounds are to be thoroughly repaired, and the former President, Rev. S. M. Frost, will resume the duties suspended by the operation of the war.

THE WILMINGTON papers state that the captain and crew of the Schr. Josephine, which was wrecked on New Inlet Bar, on Monday night last, made a miraculous escape, losing all their clothes, and suffering excessively from cold.—These men are now in very destitute circumstances, and the Seamen's Friends Society is unable to provide for them sufficiently.

EXTENSIE BUMMING BY NEGROES.—The Newbern Times mentions that bands of armed, lawless negroes are prowling through Craven county, stealing and robbing ad libitum. No less than four highway robberies have been committed in broad day-light, on the public road leading to Tuscarora, within the past twenty days. The Times observes:

"A great many persons imagine that the freedmen, if left without federal protection, would be oppressed and greatly abused. We don't believe a word of it. They would be made to respect themselves and the law, and it would be better for them. White men, if left without law or restraint, would be as bad as negroes. Law is necessary for all, and should be enforced."

ENCOURAGING.—We clip the following item from the Wilmington Journal, and are pleased to record such evidences of returning prosperity. What we need particularly, at the present time, is an influx of capital and enterprise to our midst:

"The cotton plantation of the late Henry Battle, of Edgecombe, rented until 1st January 1867, at public auction by New Jersey planters, at $2,500 for about 400 acres of land.

A portion of the farm of Dr. James Battle, of the same county, about 150 acres of cleared Tar land, was rented likewise at auction for $700 for the present year."

The same firm has also rented, at figures equally high, the plantation of General W. A. Blount, of Beaufort county.

We learn that Robert Norfleet, Esq., of Edgecombe county, has sold his celebrated "Hope Lodge" farm to a Northern planter, for $30 per acre. The purchaser designs engaging in the cultivation of cotton.

The cotton planters of Edgecombe have generally succeeded in hiring their fre dmen as laborers, for the cultivation of cotton, for the present year. The usual wages is $13 per month and board, the laborer to lose lost time."

In addition to the foregoing, we learn that William Grimes, Esq., of this city, has rented his plantation, in Pitt county, to Northern men, for the sum of $10,000 in gold per annum.

BILL ARP.—The Crockett (Texas) Quid Nunc says of Bill Arp:

"Bill is an old friend of ours, we having known him years ago when he was connected with the Rome (Ga.) Grubber. B. A. is Judge Chas. H. Smith, of Rome, Ga., formerly law partner of Hon. J. W. A. Underwood, before the war a member of Congress from the Rome district. He was a Judge of the Inferior Court of Floyd county several years ago. The best part of the thing is, there is a real genuine Bill Arp, a ferryman on the Etowah, near Rome, from whom Judge Smith got his start as B. A. The real Bill is about as good viva voce as the fictitious Bill is on paper."

HOOP SKIRTS IN PAYMENT FOR ADVERTISING.—A Charleston editor, having received from a Northern city a proposition to publish certain advertisements and take his pay in hoop skirts, replies thus:

"We are almost naked—our families escaped the flames with only what they had on, and nearly nine months have passed since then.—Hoop skirts will not cover our nakedness. Perhaps if you were to make some proposal to accompany them with cloth sufficient to fill up the interstices, they might be made serviceable."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—The memorial presented to the Senate on Tuesday from the New York Chamber of Commerce, asking the passage of an act exempting suitors in the National Courts of the Southern States from the operation of State statutes of limitation long enough to give loyal creditors an opportunity to enforce their demands, set forth that the liabilities of Southern debtors at the outbreak of the war amounted to $150,000,000, only a small portion of which has been extinguished.

Desertions from the regular army are very numerous.

Commodore Shubrick will be President of the court-martial for the trial of Raphael Semmes.

There are now seventeen large steamers plying between France and America.

The Treasury Department refuses to settle any cotton or other claims from the Southern States until after Congressional action.

The New York house agent who caused the death of a family, from coal gas, by the stopping of a flue, has been indicted and held to bail in $3,000.

General News.

Governor Marshall, of Minnesota, was inaugurated at St. Paul, on the 6th instant. In his message he favors the equality of races.

Hon. George Bancroft has accepted the invitation to deliver the eulogy on the life and character of President Lincoln before Congress on the 12th of February.

The Savannah papers of January 1. report the ceremonies attendant upon the interment there of twelve Confederate soldiers, whose remains had been removed thither from Farmsville, Va., where they fell in battle. Bishop Elliott made an address, and the ladies decked the graves with floral tributes.

"SO-CALLED."—The President, in his late message to Congress, in regard to the Mexican embroglio, speaks of Maximilian as the "so-called Emperor of Mexico," and of his Empire as the "so-called Empire of Mexico."

Among the appropriations made by the board of supervisors of Buffalo, N. Y., for their own expenses, are items for three packs of cards, two cribbage boards, one chequer board, and one set of chequer men.

Early in the war a great many churches in Washington were offered as hospitals for the sick and wounded Federal soldiers. They have now sent in their bills for rent.

Counterfeiting cigar box stamps is the latest form of swindling the internal revenue in New York. Three men, whose frauds exceed $100,000, have been arrested.

The Nationalist is a new journal established at Mobile, to be exclusively devoted to the rights and interests of the colored population of Alabama.

When Carlyle heard of Palmerston's death, he said: "Farewell, old friend; your parts were none of the best, but we shall see many an uglier man in your place."

There are 10,000 places in New York and Brooklyn, where intoxicating liquors are sold Of these over 8,000 are said to be unlicensed.

The negro population of Alexandria is estimated at 8,000; the village of Arlington, 1,200; of Washington and Georgetown about 20,000.

A young lawyer in Boston has found a Federal statute, passed in 1833, providing that in cases involving the revenue laws the United States courts shall issue mandamus to bring the cases before themselves. As the United States collects revenue from liquor, he has thus transferred all the liquor cases to the Federal courts, and stopped the liquor prosecutions under the State laws. Of course the liquor dealers will carry the case up to the Supreme Court if the decision is against them in the lower tribunals.

The detectives at Washington have been making diligent inquiry respecting the Fenian movement. They allege to have some important information bearing upon the matter, and that disclosures will shortly be made which will be damaging to certain parties.

The authorities of a town in Switzerland recently pardoned a murderer on condition that he would emigrate to the United States.

Gen. Santa Anna lives at St. Thomas, in the West Indies. He is about 70 years old, and very well preserved. Some American naval officers recently attended a grand ball at his house.

W. P. Lowry, late Confederate General, is now a Baptist preacher in Mississippi.

At present negroes can only vote in six States, namely: Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and New York—in the latter two under certain restrictions as to property.

SUIT FOR DAMAGES.—General Frank Blair, on the 3d, before leaving St. Louis for Cincinnati, entered his action in the Circuit Court against Messrs. Ridgely and Thompson for ten thousand dollars damages. The gentlemen who are made defendants in this suit were judges of election in the sixth ward, and refused to allow General Blair to vote, unless he would take the oath prescribed by the Constitution.

SEDITIOUS LANGUAGE.—The Standard of the 11th inst. says: "A paragraph in the papers, a few days ago, stated that the editor and publisher of the Goldsboro' News had been arrested by the Assistant Superintendent of Freedmen at that place, for what was considered seditious language, printed in that paper."

Such a paragraph, wherever appearing, was calculated to place us in a false position. We have never used "seditious language," nor have we ever been accused of it to our knowledge.—We claim to have honor sufficient to keep a solemn oath. We took such an oath when we accepted of the Amnesty tendered by President Johnson. To use "seditious language" would be a breach of that oath, and a sacrifice of personal honor. We are not prepared for such a breach nor for such sacrifice.

No man entered into the struggle against the government of the United States, in 1861, with more of sorrow than did the editor of this paper; he loved the Union with heartfelt devotion, and he was grieved to give it up. The sacrifice once made, he engaged in the strife with a determination to do his whole duty to the new obligations which he had imposed upon himself, at the call of a Convention of the people of his native State. Those under whom, and with whom, he served can say whether he faithfully fulfilled those obligations. The revolution failed, and he has returned to his allegiance equally determined to abide the issue of the struggle, and remain true to his plighted faith. He thinks he has sense enough to know what is "seditious language," and, as he has before stated, he has honor enough not to use it.

It is not seditious to say that "Orange," in his communication to the N. Y. Tribune, lied; nor is it seditious to express the belief, that the ladies of the South do not look upon the teaching of negro children as a passport into good society; nor is it seditious to pray that the time may soon come, when no necessity shall exist for the presence of any employee of the Freedman's Bureau, in any city, town, village, hamlet, or other locality in the entire South.—Goldsboro' News.

The only people in Alabama who celebrated the Fourth of July were the freedmen.—Carl Schurz's Report.

Which fact proves what? We may add that the only people in Alabama who celebrated the first day of January were the freedmen. This was not intended by the "disloyal whites" as a reflection on the man who got up the "present Roman Calendar.—Montgomery (Ala.) Mail.

AN ATTEMPT TO ELECT A SENATOR IN FLORIDA.—An effort, says the Floridian of the 26th, was made on Saturday last, by the Legislature, in joint meeting assembled, to elect a United States Senator for the term expiring in March, 1867. The names of three gentlemen were presented for the position, to wit: Gov. Marvin, Judge Thomas Randall, and James A. Wiggins, Esq. Three ballots were had, but no choice having been effected, the joint meeting adjourned.

The Daily News says that American securities have lately been more extensively sought after throughout Europe, than ever before.

It is stated that Maximilian was omitted from the list of Catholic sovereigns, to whom the Pope sent the customary Christmas felicitations.

The Times argues that Napoleon will withdraw from Mexico.

Extra precautions were being taken in Dublin to prevent Fenian outbreaks. The military were held in readiness to move at a moment's notice.

'Sympathy for the suffering prompts me to certify that my servant man was suffering in the last stage of Pneumonia, throwing up matter and blood in large quantities; his case was considered hopeless, so much so, that there was no medical prescription used for his recovery; I regarded him as good as dead. Hearing of the great cures made by the SOUTHERN HEPATIC PILLS, I thought that I would try an experiment on him; without any hope of success, however, I gave the Pills in large doses; in a short time, to my great surprise, there was a change for the better. I continued giving them to him until he became a perfectly sound man. He is now attending to his work with as much strength and vigor as he ever did. With his case, and what I have seen and heard of the good effect of these Pills, I do most earnestly recommend them as the best family medicine I have ever seen or used."

On and after the first day of December next they will leave on Tuesday and Friday of each week, making semi-weekly trips. Desirable Farm for Sale.

THE PLANTATION SITUATED ABOUT TWO and a half miles from the village of Magnolia on the Wilmington and Weldon R. R., between that place and Kenansville, and known as "Barbecue," is offered for sale. The tract contains 360 acres, 100 of which are cleared and have been under cultivation, producing excellent Corn, Wheat, potatoes, &c. A portion of the land is as well adapted to the culture of cotton. An inexhaustible bed of Marl, a large spring of as good water as can be found in the State, and a never failing stream, running through the center of the cleared land, are among the attractions of the place.

The timbered portion of the land being nearest the Rail Road and the entire place being easy of access to a first rate market, make it a highly desirable location for growing produce, raising stock and selling timber. Any one having the cash, can procure a bargain by applying immediately to

BEYOND THE RIVER.

Time is a river, deep and wide;
And while along its banks we stray,
We see our loved ones o'er its tide
Sail from our sight, away, away.
Where are they sped—they who return
No more to glad our wandering eyes?
They've passed from life's contracted bourne,
To land unseen, unknown, that lies
Beyond the river.

'Tis hid from view, but we may guess
How beautified that realm must be;
For gleamings of its loveliness
In visions granted, oft we see,
The very clouds, that o'er it throw
Their veil, unraised for mortal sight,
With gold, and purple tintings glow,
Reflected from the glorious light,
Beyond the river.

And gentle airs, so sweet, so calm,
Steal sometimes from that viewless sphere;
The mourner feels their breath of balm,
And soothed sorrow dries the tear.
And sometimes listening ear may gain
Entrancing sound that hither floats—
The echo of a distant strain,
Of harps, and voices, blended notes,
Beyond the river.

There are our loved ones in their rest;
They've crossed time's river; now no more
They heed the bubbles on its breast,
Nor feel the storms that sweep its shore.
But there pure love can live can last;
They look for us their home to share;
When we in turn away have passed,
What joyful greetings wait us there,
Beyond the river.

[N. O. Creole.

Prosperity North, Adversity South.

The North is prosperous, more prosperous, it is said, that it ever was before. Petroleum, war contracts, the market afforded during the war for its manufactures, and the products of the soil, all conspired to increase its wealth. Its canals, railroads, and all other works of internal improvement, are in perfect order. The domestic establishments, the equipages, the dress and appointments of the people are all on a scale of elegance hitherto unknown. The hotels, restaurants, saloons, theatres, as indeed all places of accommodation and amusement, are luxurious and attractive to an extent that is surprising. Many of both sexes are tempted from the plainer pleasures of home to the countless places of amusement—some innocent, some guilty—with which the Northern cities are filled. The report of the Board of Police for New York city shows that the saloons alone of that city muster nearly two regiments of handsome waiter-girls, numbering twelve hundred, equipped with all the meretricious charms and blandishments that women of that class know so well how to make effective. The total number of these saloons is 223, the number of visiters per day is set down at 29,950, and the receipts per week at $31,562. This is but one item of luxury and extravagance in one of the Northern cities. The police report informs us that the number of these "daughters of perdition is rapidly increasing;" that their dupes and victims are counted by thousands, and are men who move in "the best, most cultivated and highest circles of society." These twelve hundred "daughters of perdition" are women who have not quite lost all shame. The numerous dens of iniquity, where all shame and modesty are thrown aside, ambitiously attempt to supply their place by all the glittering attractions of luxury and magnificence.

This luxury and extravagance prevail throughout the whole North. How different the picture presented by the South!

The South is badly off, worse off by far than it ever was, or we trust than it will ever be again. It lost all it owned but its lands and houses—and many persons lost these. Its currency and securities, in which all its people were interested, perished in an hour. Its horses, cattle and poultry even were destroyed. Its farms were in many localities as effectually desolated as if an army of locusts had devoured them.—Its negroes, to the value of two thousand millions of dollars, were set free. Its railroads and other public works were broken up. The elegant equipages that were seen before the war are no longer seen. The few that remain belong to strangers who have come among us, or fancy men to whom a fine turn out is a sort of sign or advertisement. There is no display of dress and no attempt to follow the fashions.—Dwelling houses look old and dilapidated. The furniture is defaced and broken. The places of amusement are for the most part closed, and the hotels are plain, modest and unpretending. There are fortunately no magnificent saloons, no pretty waiter girls to allure young men to their ruin. There are drinking shops, and an abundance of them—but they do not resort to such auxilliaries to make them attractive. There is no extravagance, no attempt at display. The people are poor and have the good sense to practice a rigid economy. Poor as they are, there are those who would make them poorer. There are men who desire to take from them the little they have left—their lands and houses, the horses and farming utensils they have been able to get together, and divide them among the freedmen. There are men, and thousands of them, who covet these lands for themselves, and who would rejoice if the Government would pursue a policy so rigorous and oppressive as to force the land-owners to sell their lands so that they might purchase them for little or nothing.

Our vices are not the vices generated by an inflated prosperity. They are those developed by deprivation and poverty. We are now learning those lessons taught in the severe school of affliction, and it will, perhaps, be all the better for us in the end, that we have had so rough a beginning. Economy, frugality, industry, punctuality and morality are at present forced upon us by the necessities of our situation. We hope they will become the habits and the governing principles of our lives, so that, should we again be blessed with prosperity—and these are the means by which it is attained—we will know how to enjoy, without abusing it.—Richmond Whig.

Intemperate U. S. Senators.

A Washington correspondent, in alluding to the exclusion of Senators Saulsbury, of Delaware, and McDougal, of California, from the Standing Committees of the Senate, on the pretext of their habitual intemperance, says:

"But why suspend the axe of reform when the work is but half accomplished? Why make invidious distinctions by reproving McDougal and Saulsbury for a fault that exists to a greater extent in the son-in-law of the Chief Justice of the United States—a title by which one of the Rhode Island Senators is much better known than as simple Mr. Sprague? It is a fact patent to every Senator, and every one familiar with the doings of the Senate, that Mr. Chase's son-in-law is the most bibulous youth in Washington. It is known that he was non compos mentis during the most eventful hours of the last session, and that he exceeded all other legislative tipplers in the amount of amusement he created for the galleries during some of the night sessions of last winter. Now, why this partiality that rebukes Saulsbury and McDougal, and has not a word to say against the son-in-law of Mr. Chase?"

The successor of General Cass, Chandler, of Michigan, is also in the same category. The reason of the discrimination against McDougal and Saulsbury is, they are Democrats; Sprague and Chandler are republicans.
